

Christian Greenwood

Casting Assistant

Since a very early age, Christian Greenwood knew that she was destined for a life in the filmmaking industry. Born in Newport, Rhode Island, Christian began writing, directing, and casting her own short plays at 4 years old. She was creative in her ability to resolve even the worst casting nightmares, often replacing actors with stray cats, stuffed animals, or painted rocks. Christian quickly earned a reputation amongst the other children as a skilled creative mind with little tolerance for lame excuses like not being able to read yet or needing a naptime.

At the age of six, Christian said goodbye to her northern roots and moved to Tappahannock, Virginia because she wanted to hone her southern accent. Also, she was six and her parents did not give her an option.

Prior to her time at Arvold, Christian's career highlights include singing "Happy Birthday Mr. President" à la Marilyn Monroe to her 3rd grade class as part of their project, "Great Presidents in History."

In 4th grade, she auditioned for the lead role in Willy Wonka & the Chocolate Factory; however, she was cast as an Oompa-Loompa because according to one source "you're a fourth grader and the fourth graders are the Oompa-Loompas." In protest of the administration's unjust pre-casting, Christian delivered her lines while standing on her head.

As a senior at St. Catherine's school in Richmond, Virginia, Christian played "A FIELD" in a one-act by Thornton Wilder.

In May, Christian graduated from the University of Virginia with a degree in Drama. She is taking a break from acting so that she can focus on becoming the next Erica Arvold.
